THE Senate is not disposed to let the San Domingo business go over to the next session without more specifying.
Senator Morrill, of Vermont, yesterday made one of the most able and most temperate speeches against annexation that we have yet seen.

TRAIN has triumphed in one thing at least, and in London, where, a dozen years ago, they tore up his street railways and drove him off, they are now adopting and using them. There are twenty-three companies, that have projected 350 miles of road, at an expense of about fifteen millions of dollars.

THEY believe in taking care of people in Boston, and still cling to the idea that morality can be produced and enforced by law. The latest kink is the appointment of a committee of the General Court to consider the expediency of prohibiting minors from attending any theater or place of amusement unless accompanied by their parents or guardians.

THE hopes indulged in that the difficulties in the Pennsylvania coal region had been adjusted, have been thrown to the ground by the breaking out of a most serious riot, which has already caused the destruction of several lives and a large amount of property. It has been necessary for the Governor to issue a proclamation, and call out troops to establish the authority of the law. The mob is fighting under the Irish-American flag, and expresses a determination to prevent all miners from resuming work.

FOR a man who boasted so much of his professional honor and the purity of his motives, and challenged investigation, we think David Dudley Field is about the worst used up individual now living. He attempted to defend his illegal services for the Erie swindlers, but he has been caught at every turn, and now stands before the world a convicted accomplice of Fisk and Gould in at least one of their most notorious transactions. Attorneys will find some very interesting reading on the subject in the April number of the North American Review.

THE Administration is not satisfied with the political condition in New York, and has made several changes among the office holders. Among others Moses H. Grinnell, the Naval Officer, has been removed, apparently for no cause, but to spite Senator Fenton and strengthen the President among other politicians. Mr. Grinnell has administered the affairs of his office, as he did the Collectorship, in the interest of the government and not for the benefit of politicians. Hence he is superseded, probably by some one who will use the patronage to work up votes. If he does not succeed better than Collector Murphy has done, no one will be benefited by the change.

It seems only too true that Thiers has attempted to treat with the insurgents, and that his attempt has already borne evil fruit in increasing the boldness of the rioters, who do not intend to make peace as long as they seem to hold every advantage. The reign of terror has commenced. Reports from Paris all agree that the city is in a frightful condition. The churches are being sacked, private houses pillaged, and the boasted equality of communism is being produced as fast as mad license can do it.
The rage of the mob is largely directed against the priests, who are arrested and maltreated in various ways. One dispatch says there were no religious services in Paris yesterday, and when it is remembered that yesterday was Good Friday, one of the greatest days of the year in the Catholic church, some conception of the state of affairs in this Catholic country can be had. Fighting has been going on in the vicinity of Paris, but with what result is not yet known. The only hope for France seems to lie in the return of the Germans.

The Seeds of Mischief.

The Ku Klux bill has passed the House, and as the Senate has been discussing its principles for several days, with no indication of considerable dissent, we may presume it will pass there without material change. If it does the Republicans will have sown the seeds of a harvest of belated repentance. Substantially the law overrides State authority, and absorbs local into national jurisdiction. Whatever Congress deems improperly done by a State in the protection of its citizens, may be corrected by Congress. There is no limit and no resistance. No application of State authorities for national interference is required, no investigation is exacted, no evidence of State imbecility needed.

Congress is all sufficient to decide when interference is necessary, and to decide how far interference may extend. This appears clearly in the abstract of the bill which we published yesterday evening. Ist. "It makes any conspiracy or combination of two or more persons to deprive any class of persons of the equal protection of law a felony, and puts the case into the Federal Courts." This is an assumption of power to punish combinations against State as well as Federal laws. It ousts a State's jurisdiction of one class of offences against its own laws. The "equal protection of law," provided by the fourteenth Amendment, embraces "protection of life," provided for by State statutes against murder, "protection of liberty" provided for by State statutes against false imprisonment; "protection of property" provided for by State statutes against robbery, theft, fraud and trespass. Congress takes every combination to violate these State laws out of the hands of the State, virtually, by assuming to punish them without the intervention or assent of the State authorities. Why a combination of two men to cheat a third out of his farm may not be swept into this wide vortex of Federal interference, we can't see.
And we can't see, either, how the condition will be touched more nearly by a law which punishes a single offender, than by a law which punishes two of them. If Congress may interfere against criminal combinations, it may interfere against any other form of crime. What provision or implication checks one that does not prohibit both?
And if neither be prohibited, what is a State but an ill-defined element of an amnivorous general government. It is something, or nothing, at the will of Congress. "In case of any obstruction of the laws of a State, or the United States, so as to deprive any person of any privilege, immunity or right, and the State authorities are unable, or fail to afford protection, or apply to the President for protection, the President may use the national forces to "arrest offenders and deliver them to the United States Courts," and "the President may suspend the writ of habeas corpus wherever and whenever "unlawful combinations may exist, till July, 1872." This assumes the power to enforce a State's law without its assent or knowledge, to use the army to to it, and to suspend the habeas corpus to allow it to be effectually done. If a State's power is not swallowed up in this provision and the other, we are curious to know whereabouts that part is that can't be swallowed. If a State, in the opinion of Congress, don't enforce its own laws, Congress may empower the President to do it, and the opinion as to the State's feebleness or irreligion may be arrived at by any of those processes through which Congress obtains enlightenment, as in some of the legislation on the whisky tax, and on railway subsidies. Congressional discretion is absolute, and Congressional discretion is passed over unimpaird to the President. Now, as we remarked once before touching this measure, such an assumption of power is as easy and constitutional when the occasion for its exercise occurs in Indiana as when it occurs in Mississippi, and the Democracy can find it here just as readily as the Republicans have found it there. If anybody believes they won't find it, he has more faith in their stupidity or their honesty than we have.
And when they find it, if the Supreme Court don't save the Republicans from the effects of their own example, they will see what sort of a harvest they will get from the seed sown in Shellabarger's oil.

Banty Tim.

BY JOHN HAY.
[Remarks of Sergeant Timon Joy to the White Man's Committee of Spunky Point, Illinois.] [From Harper's Weekly.]
I reckon I'll year drift, gentles—You 'ow the boy shan't stay;
This is a white man's country;
You're Democrats, you say;
And where's our, and seels, and wherefore, The times bein' all out of 'flat,
The negroes bein' got to money, From the Illinois o' Spunky Point!
Let's reason the thing a minute:
I'm an old-fashioned Democrat too, Though I laid my politic out for the way For to keep till the war was through, But now I've been allowin' 'em to Vote as I used to do, Though it grates me like the devil to train Along o' such fools as you.
Now dox my date of a kin see,
In all the light of the day, What you're goin' to do with the question If Tim shall go or stay; If you'll let me give notice, I'll need you better than the boy;
He kin check his trunk to a warmer clime Than he'll find in Illinois.
Why, blame your hearts, jest hear me!
You know the ungodly day When our left struck Vicksburg Heights, boy slipped
And you and I and our war far,
When the great reaper said behind, Fur reus our million to me With a reb carved in, and a leg on a strike, I sprang on that cursed gallop.
Lord! how the hot run went fur us,
And briled and blotted and burned;
How the rebel bein' whizzed round us, But a case in his death grip turned;
Till along toward dusk I seen a thing I could'n believe for a spell:
That nigger—that Tim—was a crawlin' to me, Through the fire proof, gilt-edged hall!
The reb is seen him as quick as me,
And the bullets buzzed like bees;
But he jumped for us, and would've red me, Though a shot brought him close to his knees;
But one o' you teches the boy,
With a d-d snarl and a fust, Till he in our line he dropped on both,
His black hide ridin' with ball.
So, my gentles gents, that's my answer,
And here—says Banty Tim—He tramp'd death's see for me that day, And I'm not goin' back on him!
You may read: I'll tell you come home,
But one o' you teches the boy,
He'll wrastle him to night in hell, Or my name's not Timon Joy!

"ROMANS."

The board of health—a plain diet, A bad policy—one that has run out.

What's the proper age for a person? The parsonage, of course.
Mrs. Nettie Chase Hoyt's wedding presents were valued at $50,000.
Bayard Taylor has decided to leave his farm and reside in New York.
A poor equestrian should always keep his eye on the mane chance.
A little heifer has been born to Ole Bull, at his home, West Lebanon, Maine.
Donald Dinnie, the Scottish champion athlete, is en route to America again.
A Universalist church in Philadelphia has been converted into a synagogue.
There are in Oregon 3,000,000 acres of swamp land, and about 3,300,000 acres in California.
Over $335,000,000 and 1,500,000 people are employed in the liquor traffic in Great Britain.
Colonel W. R. Adams, an old Natchez editor, died, last week, in Alabama, aged fifty-one.
There are consumed in Boston every day 23,216 gallons of milk—and water, costing $7,927.
The library and personal effects of Thomas D'Arcy McGee are to be sold at auction, in Montreal.
It takes nearly 1,800 laborers and 3,000 carts to keep the streets of New York in anything like condition.
The papers are starting that old story afresh about old Mr. Seward contemplating marriage with a young lady.
Hope & Co., the renowned banking house of Amsterdam, has had nearly 200 partners since its foundation.
The memorial church window for Alice Cary has been abandoned, and a monument in Greenwood will be placed instead.
A Western music dealing firm reports that it has sold about a thousand miles of fiddle strings since it has been in business.
The forty-five miles of the St. Paul and Sioux City Railroad, lying between St. James and the Iowa line are now under contract.
The San Francisco bar will make an overland excursion to the East in May, and there will be a two months' recess of all the Courts.
The oldest postmaster in the United States is said to be John Siebering of Lehigh county, Pennsylvania, 84 years of age, and commissioned in 1820.
Bishop Coleman prefaces the reading of the creed with the declaration that he does not believe it, but reads it as an officer of the Queen.
Theodore Porter, son of the Admiral, who stood at the foot of his class in the Naval Academy has been promoted to be ensign over sixty-three middlemen of his class.
The Lenox library, presented to New York city by James Lenox, is to stand on Fifth avenue, opposite Central Park, and cost $1,000,

Fifty thousand cubic feet of faced granite is to be shipped from the quarries at Duluth for the construction of a lighthouse on Spectacle Island, Sault canal, Lake Huron. The cost of this granite will be $150,000.
As a contribution was being taken up at a church in Danbury, Connecticut, last Sunday, a stranger in the congregation grasped the hat, appropriated the contents, and made good his escape.
For fifty years, Deacon Andrew Leach of Searsport, Maine, was a member of a church from which, in 2,000 Sundays of that half century, he was absent but twice, being out of town upon the missing days.
At the funeral of the late William H. Burleigh, the Rev. Mr. Chadwick said he would omit reading from the Scriptures, and read instead, "a more sacred Scripture," from some of the poems of the deceased. Which he did.

A Quaker lady recently explained to her new girl that washing day came every Second Day. The girl left in high dudgeon. She didn't go to be washing every other day.
The street railway problem is agitating London, the people being quite anxious to have more "trams," as they call them, laid down.
The Mormon semi-annual conference is in session at Salt Lake, and the tabernacle is filled with an immense concourse. It is proposed to build a second temple at St. George, in the southern part of the Territory.
A friend inquires: "May not the appearance on Saturday last of a colored boy in the House of Representatives at Washington, in the capacity of page, be termed 'a dark page in American history'?"
A stolen kid saved a girl's life in Fond du Lac last week, for if the man who did the deed had not pulled her head forward just as he did a beam, which fell from the upper floor, would have dashed her brains out.
Fifty thousand cubic feet of faced granite is
the construction of a lighthouse on Spectacle

He killed five years before the first gun of war was heard, and he was a "rough," who had no more thought of country or liberty or anything but the fun of a fight, than he had of a tariff or the whisky tax. The colored Republicans would have done just as well to have left him out of their toasts the other night. He is no credit to them.

LOCAL ITEMS.
THE TRADE PALACE OPENING.
DESCRIPTION OF WHAT A LADY SAW THERE—A SCENE OF DAZZLING BRILLIANT AND BEAUTY—SUITS, SHAWLS, HATS, BONNETS, ETC.
Of all the so-called openings that have ever been given in this city, not one has approached that of the Trade Palace of day before yesterday. The display of rich and costly goods was such as is seldom met with in much larger cities than Indianapolis. It outstripped everything of the kind ever heretofore attempted in this city, at least. The array of colors of every description was really dazzling. One could but stand still in perfect bewilderment. The arrangement of the rooms was in every respect much finer than at the opening last autumn. The constant throng of visitors in nowise detracted from the attractiveness of the occasion. Some of the most elegantly dressed ladies which it has been our fortune to see in Indianapolis, added their beauty to the already perfect Bazaar of color and fashion. Many sales of the finest articles on exhibition were made, so that the "opening" was a success in a pecuniary point of view, as well as being complete as a matter of art. Myriads of obliging girls were in attendance, ready to answer an indefinite number of queries regarding each article.

The first object to be looked at of course were the ladies suits. Near the stairs a beautiful black and white striped silk suit was displayed, which was a miracle of lace and ruchings. A deep flounce at the bottom of the skirt was cut in sections, laid back on revers and lined with white silk, with an outer netting of lace. A quilted ruching edge with lace surrounding each, and a trimming of the same headed the flounce. The overskirt was made short in front and long behind, with openings at each side turned back and lined to match the pieces on the skirt, a quilting of lace and silk surrounding the skirt. The high basque was made with long side bodies, and short at the back. The sleeves with an under coat-sleeve and an angel sleeve for an outer one.

Further up the room, and in the center were two suits, one of Chalais and the other of Poplin, both fresh from Prussian dressmakers at Berlin. The first had a deep flounce headed with two narrow double pleatings headed with a straight band, stitched with silk of a darker shade in a beautiful braiding pattern. This had a long overskirt quite deep and plain with a short nobby jacket, and tight sleeves with large oversleeves, all trimmed with the band of stitching to match the skirt. The other, a steel-colored poplin, was quite a combination of quilting and puffs, both skirts having a number of quilted ruchings, the overskirts puffed on panner. A half tight basque with large sleeves, trimmed to match the skirt completed this stylish suit.

A handsome gross grain suit was made with basque, over and under skirt, the latter having a deep flounce with an overlapping band cut in points, trimmed with rucheaux of silk banded with satin and ornamented with buttons. The overskirt was cut with deep points on each side of the front and a plain, round back. The jacket was half tight and trimmed to match the skirt, with coat sleeves ruffled at the hand.

Another black silk suit had the flounce frayed at the bottom and arranged to form fan shaped pieces, pointed piece bound with satin and edged with lace headed each fan. The overskirt was open both at the front and back and trimmed with satin and lace as was the half tight jacket.

Some black grenadine suits were displayed which were as perfect in design and finish as one could find in any city in the world. One particularly noticeable stood near the window and was the magnet which constantly drew a crowd of observers. The overskirt was trimmed with leaves of grenadine bound with satin and an under edge of lace. Platted fancy places with crocheted medallions ornamented the skirt.

An elegant green moire antique was trimmed with ruchings of silk both on the over and lower skirt, with fancy pieces on the lower skirt at regular intervals. The overskirt and jacket were also trimmed with lace. The basque was cut in deep points, and had large sleeves lined with white satin.

The display of white suits was very complete, there being a score or more in every imaginable style, ranging in price from $6 up to the more elegant and stylish mode of higher priced goods. In linen suits the variety was fully as extensive, some being very beautifully made, doing ample credit to the makers thereof. A white Swiss overskirt was the admiration of every beholder. It was handsomely trimmed with puffs and rows of inserting of Duchesse lace and looped with roses both at side and back.

The Trade Palace can certainly boast now of as perfect a modiste in art and fashion as any city on this continent.

The black silk jackets were in different styles. The prevailing styles, however, are of medium length and half loose with large sleeves trimmed with silk gimp and fringe or satin and lace.

Lace shawls of every description were shown. One of exquisite design, valued at $400, was certainly very beautiful.

Black shawls and white ones, varying in price and all beautiful and fairy-like as a summer dream were exhibited. An embroidered one with lace border was sold at $120. The collection of house jackets was very large, and some very unique and beautiful; a few were embroidered in colors; others in white, in the richest designs.

ed the most beautiful hat on exhibition, and sold at $10. A very handsome hat was in the Gipsy style, and of black Neapolitan, trimmed with autumn leaves, black lace and straw colored ribbon. The Gipsy still seems to rule, although its reign has been of considerable duration already. It is now to be de-throned however, and we shall have the Lily instead.

A blue Gipsy bonnet was a perfect wilderness of forget-me-nots. Another of lace was completely surrounded with a grape vine and grapes and feathering of green silk. Nearly all bonnets and many hats have long pendants of ribbon knotted together or apart, some are decorated with a knot of flowers and lace, or a buckle quite near the end.

Ribbons, sashes and flowers were shown in endless profusion. This department shows the labor of skillful fingers, both in arrangement and mechanism.

The display in the evening was, if possible, finer than during the day. One could easily imagine, after reaching the top of the stairs, that she had been touched by a wand in the hands of the fairies and wafted to fairy-land; or that she had been suddenly transported to some labyrinth of beauty, and for the moment completely lost. Visitors could scarcely realize that they were among real and not imaginary beauties so dazzling was the glare of fashion and elegance.

It has been estimated that during the day and evening as many as four thousand people visited this palatial establishment. The sales we are assured ran well up among the thousands. All day yesterday, and to-day too, have visitors in large numbers thronged through the myriads of avenues leading in and around among the magnificent piles of merchandise. The proprietors, Messrs N. R. Smith & Co., appear well pleased with the result of their spring opening, and feel encouraged to persevere in their endeavors to place the Trade Palace of Indianapolis among the leading mercantile establishments of the West. May success crown their efforts.

VIRGINIA DANCE.
Frank A. Boyd & Co. have taken the agency for Indiana and Eastern Illinois for Bradley's Enamelled Paint, which is the best and cheapest in the world. If it was not, Frank would not handle it. We want painters and others to test it for themselves before they judge. Who would not take the best article at the least money? 22 South Meridian street is headquarters.

We often hear predictions that certain life insurance companies will not last long, but the Phoenix Mutual of Hartford, Connecticut, is not one of them. On the contrary, everybody knows that the Phoenix ranks equal with any other company in the country and one of her policies is as good as the gold. See Mr. Folsom, the State agent, and let him write you up. Every man ought to have his life insured, and now is the best time.

The Howard Fire Insurance Company of New York will do to do. Mr. Abromet represents it here, as well as the old Aetna and other good companies. Any company that Mr. Abromet represents you may set down as first class. Have a chat with him in the Aetna Building.

The Farmer's Bee Hive is so simple, that any man or good sized boy, who can use a saw and hammer, can make one, and he will then have the best hive in the world. Just look at the hive once, and you will be certain to want one. W. T. Gibson will show it up, and dispose of farm, county, township and State rights, on very liberal terms, at 85 East Market street, up stairs. Don't fail to see it.

The ladies will find first-class jewelry, "the latest and prettiest patterns," at Colcler's, just as cheap as at any other place in the city, and many say considerably cheaper. Wonder if they are not right. Well, go see, and tell your friends.

We want all our readers, rich and poor, old and young, to step into Craft & Cutler's, 24 East Washington street, and see beautiful sights. They show a very full line of solid silver and heavy plated ware, which embrace new and elegant designs. A most lovely and varied assortment of fine jewelry of various values, and the best stock of watches ever yet opened in this city. Also everything that can be thought of belonging to their line. The prices will drive no body to other stores.

Spring opening of children's, boys' and girls' clothing at the Eagle Clothing Store, southwest corner of Washington and Madison street. In cloth, tricot, diagonal, Scotch, cassimere and flannel in all the new shades and mixtures.

Boys' school suits, boys' dress suits, Boys' Scotch Cheviot suits, New and nobby styles received daily.

Dust to Dust.
Dust to dust! the tolling bell Peals the funeral dirge then well!
Dust to dust! the solemn drum Warns us that time to come—Dust to dust! the good and brave, Great and lowly, lord and slave, Wrinkles age with silver hair, Youth and strength and beauty rare, Both the vernal and the just,
Own the doom of Dust to Dust!

Pass the solemn pageant by,
Who shall be the next to die?
Who shall read his neighbor's fate,
And the mystic dooming try?
He of firmest heart and limb, Death may sometime call for him, While the victim lingers ill, Breathes the air of heaven still,
While there's life there's hope and trust, Till the hour of Dust to Dust!

Honored ashes, noble clay, Mingle with the dust to day, Drooping round the sable urn, See a mighty nation mourn.
Glorious in memory's breen, Now the soldier sleeps in death!
In the earth he loved to plough, Lowly dwells the farmer now, Lulled by the nation's trust, Falls the ruler, Dust to Dust!

Dust to dust! The story's told, O'er the dust the stone is rolled,
And where darts the spirit then,
That must all the thoughts of men.
Dust to dust! what e'er we may have,
Mortal dust from earthly grave;
Dust to dust the chant of doom, While we hasten to the tomb.
Man is feeble, God is just, Requiescat! Dust to Dust!

THE GRASS.
O God, more light! I can not see my way;
The hope I held is fading from my sight,
And all is darkness where there once was day; O Father, give thy erring child more light.
I know the spirits that around me cling Are evil, and my soul leaps up in flight; But still their demon voices through me ring, E'en while I pray unto Thee here to-night.
If I could find, if I could tread the path, I could see but once what is the right, Then with true friends could I brave the wrath Of these fierce fiends and put them all to flight.
O Father, show me that heavenly way,
That I may ever strive to walk aright;
For I am willing, and in soul I pray For light, O Father, for thy blessed light.

THE PULPIT.
Nine gold fears not the fire, nor solid stone
The water.
Men are believed on their word, but God is Not taken at his.
Live up to your prayers and you shall have What you pray for.
Danger always attendeth at the heels of Pride and ambition.
Perfect virtue terrifieth an accuser; indifferent virtue whets him on.
He is unworthy to be a master over others that can not master himself.
It is God's design that truth should shine both from the world and the life.
Righter says of children: The smallest are nearest God, just as the smallest stars are nearest the sun.
He that is good will become better, and he that is bad worse; for virtue, vice and crime never stop.
He who has not learned the lesson of resolution self-help has made little progress toward real manhood.
We often omit the good we might do in consequence of thinking about that which is out of our power to do.
If thou refusest the cross sent thee by an angel, the devil will impose on thee a heavier burden.—[The Baptistery.] There is universal religious interests in many of the churches of Boston, and union prayer meetings are being held daily.

He presents a wretched specimen of religion who labors more to convert Christian men to his own sectarian views than sinners to Christ.
Little local noises deaden the loudest distant ones; so it is that this world shrouds out from the ears of men, as it does, the voice of Almighty God.
Observe what directions your thoughts and feelings most readily take when you are alone and you will then form a tolerably correct opinion of your real state.

The Rev. Benjamin Eaton, founder and for 30 years rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Galveston, died a few days ago at the age of 66.
He was a native of Dublin, Ireland.
There is but one single fact which one may oppose to all the wit and argument of infidelity—namely, that no man ever repented being a Christian on his death-bed.

To attempt to mortify sin by outward reformation is "altogether unchristianous as if a man should lay a plaster upon his clothes to cure a wound in his body."—[Hopkins.] Men's happiness spring mainly from moderate troubles, which afford the mind a healthy stimulus, and are followed by a reaction which produces a cheerful flow of spirits.
Poverty and riches are mere imaginative distinctions. The man who can eat his bread dry and be happy is certainly richer than he who can't eat unless it is spread with butter.
Christian assurance does not become a person who is chiding some darling sin. The indulgence of wickedness grieves away the Holy Ghost, from whom alone assurance can come.
Every sin has a Satan in it, and robs the soul of its beauty. Every sin hath reason in it. It is an endeavor to carry away some one of the crown jewels of heaven.—[Halliburton.]

A new place of worship, called the Church of Jesus, and accommodating about 700 persons, has been opened at Madrid. This is the sixteenth place of Protestant worship already opened in the Spanish capital.

Edwin P. Batchelder, of Mansfield, Mass., has willed all his property, some $60,000, to the American Bible Society, to supply each scholar in the United States public schools with a copy of the Scriptures.

A troubled mind is often relieved by maintaining a cheerful demeanor. The effort withdraws its attention from the cause of pain, and the cheerfulness which it promotes in others extends by sympathy to itself.
Among no people has the belief of immortality been stronger than among the Celts; one could borrow money from them to return in another world. Pious Christian usurers should model their lives after this model.— [Heinrich Heine.]

A recent version of Henry Ward Beecher is termed "another ecclesiastical broadside." He held that the Lord's Supper is not a command; that forms and ceremonies should be abolished; that church membership is not imperative, though desirable.
Discord and schism in a church kill the spirit of prayer. And that is to a church what the extinction of the sap would be to a tree, or what the suppression of the breath would be to the body. It would be death. For a prayerless church is a dead church.
The London Standard says that if any attempt is made to deprive any of the London Ritualistic clergy of the vestments, Dean Mason and Sturday and the others will be called upon to wear robes of sackcloth, and in case of refusal will be proceeded against.

may take years to bring you above the surface, but every shell that you throw off raises you so much higher.

There are many fruits which never turn sweet until the frost has laid upon them. There are many nuns that never fall from the boughs of the tree of life till the frost has opened and ripened them. And there are many elements of life that never grow sweet and beautiful till sorrow touches them.

Two prisoners in the Iowa Penitentiary, John Walker and Richard Allen, were converted under the preaching of the Quakers, Mary H. Rogers, and upon their own application, after the usual rigid examination, were entered as members of the Society of Friends, at the Salem quarterly meeting. This was a year ago. Recently Walker was released from prison, his time of service having expired, and he made his way on foot to Salem, Henry county, (telling people whom he asked for food and lodging that he was just out of prison), where he was given employment and a home, and welcomed into the circle of the religious society.

A writer in the New York Christian Advocate (Methodist Episcopal) says: "The question of electing a colored Bishop at the next general conference is purely one of expediency and not of principle. If the demands of the work require one, and a colored man with suitable qualifications for the office can be found, he should be elected, but not otherwise.
The idea that duty to the colored race requires us to make one of their number a Bishop, without strict regard to qualifications, is the out-spring of an unreasoning clericalism. When we place the colored man on the same plane as the white man our duty to him is accomplished. Therefore his rise or fall depends mainly upon himself. To demand honors and distinction for him simply on account of his color is not only wrong, either on the white or the colored man's side, but it is to his interest. A disqualified man would dis-grade both the office and the occupant. In the case of the colored man it would react disastrously upon his race, alienating its friends, and intensifying the contempt of its enemies.
No true friend would desire to see him subjected to such a misfortune."

MAN FOUND DROWNED.

A Stranger Fished Up in the Canal.

A little after noon to-day while some boys were fishing in the canal near the southwest corner of Military Park, the body of a man was discovered lying upon his back in the bed of the canal. The drawing off of the water for repairs of the Water Works enabled the body to be discovered. Indications are that it had lain where found for four or five days. There are indications also that the man had been bruised about the head. Upon his right hand little finger was a large silver ring with A. H. Paul engraved upon it. In his pocket were found a watch, one gold ring, two silver rings, two pocket books, a flask half filled with whisky, twenty-five cents in money and several cancelled notes drawn somewhere in Illinois.

He seems to be a man of about thirty years of age, has sandy mustache and chin whiskers; was ordinarily dressed, and was about five feet four inches in height. No one has thus far recognized him.

The remains were taken to the undertaking establishment of Mr. Kregelo, where an inquest will be held this afternoon.

On Saturday, the 22d Van Amburgh's menagerie will arrive in this city, and give a matinee and evening exhibition. This grand caravan has no circus connected with it, but is such an entertainment as clergymen and teachers may attend, taking with them their families and pupils. It consists of nearly five hundred rare and costly specimens of animals, many of them entirely new to this country, such as the lordly eland, the rhinoceros, hippopotamus, blesbok, springbok, etc., together with ferocious lions, tigers and hyenas, performed by Prof. Langworthy. The performing elephant, "Tippeco Sah," a baby elephant and an infant camel are also with this collection, beside a large number of the rarest exotic birds of the most brilliant plumage. There is no show like it on the continent.

Robinson's Circus.

This famous combination will give its first exhibition in this city Monday afternoon, and its last on Tuesday evening. The Cincinnati Equivocal of the 5th has the following: The streets of the city have seldom witnessed such a pageant as that presented by the parade of Robinson's circus and menagerie yesterday morning. The company is now performing at the Rink, afternoon and evening, and will remain until the close of the week. The Rink was crowded last night to its utmost capacity. It is estimated that over three thousand persons were present—the largest audience that ever witnessed a circus performance in Cincinnati.

In our account of the burning of Oxford College, Oxford, Ohio, yesterday, it was stated that one of the girls, Miss Mary Wilson, who jumped thirty-nine feet to the ground, was dangerously hurt. A letter to Mr. J. M. Telford, of this city, to-day, announces that although painfully hurt, she is not considered in a dangerous condition.
